Hodges University and Florida Keys Community College Build on Management Degree

Thanks to an articulation agreement between Florida Keys Community College and Hodges University, students wanting to pursue a bachelor's degree will be able to do so locally. Hodges University will be accepting associate degrees from Florida Keys Community Colleges students who want to pursue a bachelor's degree. According to Hodges University President, Terry McMahan “we are extremely thankful to the staff and students at (Florida Keys Community College) for this opportunity.”

Hodges University will offer an accelerated degree completion program in Management. Students will be capable of earning up to 12 college credits in a 15 week period. According to Florida Keys Community College President, Jill-Landesberg-Boyle, the format being offered by Hodges will make the program extremely appealing to Florida Keys Community College students.

The Bachelor of Science in Management (BSM) degree prepares students with broad-based managerial skills which enable them to be successful in a variety of occupations. Graduates are employed in numerous industries where they can showcase their management and leadership talents. The hallmarks of successful managers and leaders today are skill that develop and manage and organization's most important asset--its employees. Such skills are fostered and developed throughout the BSM program. Businesses and corporations today are eager to employ individuals who have the ability to work with and through people in order to achieve strategic goals.
